THE DESIGN OF FUTURE: THE NEW CHALLENGE OF GLOBALIZATION
“THE WORLD WE WANT”

The impact of the disruptive technologies, stagnating incomes, low growth, and low productivity, geopolitical conflicts and environmental crisis... Global economy and liberal democracies around the world face fundamental set of challenges. While we are approaching to the second quarter of 21st Century, global dynamics point to what may be a transitional phase of globalization. To ensure an inclusive and sustainable future for all, we need to actively engage in the efforts to design the next phase of globalization. What are the risks and the opportunities ahead? How should we address the shortcomings of the previous phases? How can we improve the overall distribution of benefits of globalization and the fourth industrial revolution across and within the world societies? How can we make use of the emerging technologies for prosperity, security and freedom and for environmental sustainability?

12:20-13:30 FINANCING THE 21st CENTURY: DEVELOPMENT OF INVESTMENT BANKING AND CAPITAL MARKETS

Boosting jobs, growth, and investment is a key priority for a sustainable global economy. Improving and diversifying sources of financing and investment tools, making smarter use of financial resources and promoting high-quality investments are central to fostering economic growth, a resilient financial system, and innovative businesses. What are the current obstacles to the development of investment banking and capital markets in different regions? How can governmental policies contribute to overcoming the major issues faced by financial system? How can we connect finance more efficiently to the wider economy? What would be the impact of enhanced European Economic and Monetary Union on the international financial system?

THE GOLDEN RULE OF SUSTAINING COMPETITIVENESS IN THE GLOBAL ARENA (THEME: SUSTAINING COMPETITIVENESS IN THE EXPORT MARKETS THROUGH INNOVATION, PRODUCTIVITY, AND GROWTH)

Protectionist sentiment has been on the rise around the world. Citizens who feel left behind by globalization challenge the free trade agenda in world's leading trading nations. On the other hand, we are living at the age of global value chains. The cross-border flows of goods, investment, services, know-how and people create a complex system of interdependency through the production processes that are fragmented across countries. The disruption of the value chains can have not only major economic implications but also indirect political and security implications. It is time to frame the debate beyond "protectionism versus free trade" and to discuss the crucial elements of a progressive, socially and environmentally sensitive trade agenda. How can we promote stronger growth, more and better jobs, higher living standards for all via trade policy? How can trade agenda support the adoption of stronger environmental standards on a global level? How can we make trade deals more responsive to the needs of small businesses and consumers? Which policies need to accompany the trade policy to ensure equal distribution of free trade benefits within societies?

BUILDING RESILIENT BUSINESSES IN TURKEY

Disasters expose people and businesses to damaging consequences. In the last ten years, disasters affected 1.7 billion people and caused total damage of US$1.4 trillion. While the government maintains the overall responsibility for responding to emergencies, local communities and private sector networks also play crucial roles in disaster risk reduction, emergency preparedness, response and recovery. Private sector networks can be major contributors increasing the scale and effectiveness of the response in a coordinated manner together with national actors.

The World Humanitarian Summit in 2016 in Istanbul highlighted the need for deeper cooperation in disaster risk management. The private sector, the United Nations and partners launched the Connecting Business initiative (CBI) which engages the private sector strategically before, during and after emergencies.

Turkey is a disaster-prone country. For example, 70% of the population lives in an area highly vulnerable to earthquakes. In addition, the country faces risks of forest fires, landslides, floods and conflict. In this event, a private sector network will be launched to engage the private sector more strategically and holistically to work with national actors.

The network will build from the Business Disaster Resiliency Program for Turkey (Sağlam KOBİ) enhancing the resilience of small- and medium-sized enterprises in Turkey and other business networks.

12:00 – 12:50 RESPONDING TO THE CHANGING WORLD OF WORK WITH THE SKILLS ECOSYSTEM APPROACH

Introduction

Government and private sector partners in India have intensified their collaboration to create a conducive skilling environment for businesses. This would smoothen the transition of the workforce from being ready for “jobs” to being prepared for “work.” In India, the government provides direction to the private sector, which does not operation alone in skills development. Under the leadership of the Ministry of Skill Development and Entrepreneurship, India created many different policy measures to govern the skills business ecosystem in the country, including the National Policy for Skill Development and Entrepreneurship and NSDC. These policies were ecosystem-level interventions as the Government needed to fundamentally change the skilling industry to meet the enormous challenge it had set itself of skilling millions.

09:00-10:15 INVESTING IN THE COMMON FUTURE OF EUROPE: TIME FOR CONSTRUCTIVE
VISION AND SUBSTANTIAL ACTION

The lessons of the last decade's economic crisis demonstrates the need for a stronger Euro zone governance. The exponential velocity of the Fourth Industrial Revolution is challenging the viability of the European social model and global competitiveness. Democracies across Europe are being tested by rising populism. These new developments seem to be arguments for a more homogeneous and federal European system, for a wider and better organised European area of freedom, security and justice as well as a better organized single market. Can the European Union (EU) find solutions to these rising problems is the question? Can the scenario of a well-structured multi-speed Europe as proposed by the European Commission shape the future? What will be the impact of the renewed Berlin-Paris axis? How will Brexit affect the EU and the United Kingdom, and what are its implications for European security architecture? Since recent data suggests that the economic recovery of the Euro zone is strong, despite a number of political risks, will that allow a strengthening of the EU's soft power?

ONE BELT ONE ROAD

The Belt and Road Initiative initiated by China sets a new and ambitious vision for cross-regional collaboration for development through connectivity. With the potential involvement of more than 60 countries and regions and ongoing bilateral trade and investment disputes between China and major world economies, the success of the modern Silk Road will depend on more than funding pledges. A vigorous diplomacy, strong adherence to the principles of good governance, transparency and reciprocity as well as commitment to the environmental sustainability will be required. What should China do to improve the participation of partner countries? How can the partner countries strategically engage in project planning and implementation in the third countries? What kind of complimentary multilateral consultation and coordination mechanism would be needed? Which tools can be used to mitigate risks and resolve potential disputes effectively? How should the regulatory issues be addressed? What needs to be done to ensure the utilisation of the infrastructure projects once they are built? What are the most effective financial tools to promote “a modern Silk Road?”
